Is Dogecoin Flipping The Trend?

Dogecoin's recovery marches on unhindered, successfully turning the $0.10 resistance into a support level and now stabilizing around this mark. Over the past few days, Dogecoin has rallied 29% from its $0.082 low, currently trading at $0.104. Despite this short-term uptrend, longer-term indicators paint a bearish picture for Dogecoin, as it remains below both the 50-day and 200-day moving averages. For Dogecoin to surpass its $0.20 annual high by the end of Q4, it must maintain its current upward momentum. This will require a sustained effort to overcome longer-term trends and technical indicators pointing towards a bear market.

Solana's price has declined steeply in the last few days, falling below the $131 support level. After peaking at $193, Solana saw a sharp 43% drop, reaching a low of around $110. Currently, it trades at $155, stabilizing around the $150 mark. Additionally, Solana achieved a new all-time high against Ethereum, reaching 0.062. Analysts agree that if Solana can maintain a close above $150 this month, not only is $180 within reach, but it could also be a springboard to even higher prices, with a target of $200 in sight.
