Pi Network Price Skyrockets Amid Key Mainnet Updates

In an official X post published on Sunday, the Pi Core Team has officially confirmed that the highly anticipated launch of the Open Mainnet, which was previously rescheduled from December 31st, will now take place in the first quarter of 2025. This announcement marks a crucial milestone for the PI Network community, as it promises to vastly elevate the network's utility by enabling the transfer and utilization of PI coins across diverse platforms. Consequently, this enhanced functionality positions the token to compete more vigorously within the broader cryptocurrency market.

Furthermore, as reported by CNF, the Pi Network has granted an extension to the deadline for Know Your Customer (KYC) verification and Mainnet migration, pushing it back to January 31st, 2025. This extension aims to broaden participation in the network's growth and address ongoing inclusivity and accessibility concerns.

Pi Network, launched in 2019, stands out as a unique combination of a crypto token, mobile application, and multilevel marketing (MLM) strategy. By adopting a mobile-centric approach to cryptocurrency mining, Pi Network is garnering significant attention ahead of its mainnet launch. As a blockchain-based project tailored for mobile usage, Pi Network enables users to mine Pi coins effortlessly by simply tapping a button within the app once a day, contrasting sharply with traditional cryptocurrencies that demand substantial computational power or staking.

The native token of Pi Network is the Pi coin, which users can mine directly within the app and store securely therein. Currently, Pi Network users are unable to transfer, sell, or exchange Pi coins for other cryptocurrencies. However, according to the Pi Network roadmap, these functionalities are anticipated to be introduced in the third phase, coinciding with the launch of the Pi open mainnet.
