What is Resistance Dog (REDO)?

Resistance Dog (REDO) is a meme coin launched on The Open Network (TON) as a tribute to Pavel Durov's dedication to digital freedom and resistance against censorship. Designed to symbolize the fight for an open internet, REDO leverages the cultural significance of Durov and his achievements with Telegram.

OUR VISION

A homage to the creation of Pavel Durov, founder of TON - The Open Network and Telegram, Resistance Dog ($REDO), is a symbolic representation of our fight against censorship and freedom through digital resistance. Created in 2018 by Durov, our logo is the (un)official mascot of Telegram, and is at the forefront of Telegram's consistent efforts to battle censorship by governments and multinational companies trying to restrict the ability of people to express themselves freely in digital media.

$REDO intends to create, and has begun creating a robust decentralised community that is at the forefront of the battle for digital resistance, with TON - The Open Network, Telegram and the millions of individuals fighting for the same cause.

$REDO is determined to maximise growth and adoption of TON - THE OPEN NETWORK, by integrating, through its community and memes, masses of like-minded individuals, aligned in their beliefs, while creating opportunities to build on TON - THE OPEN NETWORK.

The meme coin has quickly become a popular choice among TON users, known for its playful yet impactful branding.

From the beginning, REDO Coin lays great emphasis on community and activism. It uses social media like Twitter, Discord, and Telegram to raise awareness, organize events, and build community. As a result, the "Resistance Pack" community grew rapidly.

In addition, meme contests, virtual gatherings, and webinars have helped resistance groups grow. Transparent communication and regular updates from the team build trust and common purpose among members.

With the recent arrest of Telegram founder Pavel Durov, REDO's defiance is even more apparent, making it likely to be the next TON-based meme coin to explode.

Resistance Dog (REDO) Development History

To gain a deeper understanding of REDO meme coin, we'll look at the origins of the REDO icon.

The story of the Resistance Dog dates back to 2018, a pivotal year when Pavel Durov, who was already known for his defiant stance against the Russian regime by then.

At the height of his persecution, as the Russian government sought to censor Telegram and VK (which he also co-founded), that was when he conceptualized the idea of a symbolic dog in a hood. The idea was simple: a representation of the anonymous, resilient nature of digital resistance.

The hooded dog, later known as Resistance Dog, became a rallying point for free speech advocates and the unofficial mascot of Telegram.

REDO Tokenomics

While Resistance Dog has existed for a while, $REDO token was only officially created on the TON blockchain on January 9, 2024, by an anonymous developer. It has a total supply of 100,000,000, and liquidity management lies with the community.

After launching the token, the original developer renounced the contract address and burned the initial liquidity, effectively removing any centralized control over the token's smart contract. As a meme token, $REDO transactions incur no additional fees beyond the standard TON network fees, promoting free and unrestricted trading.
